Need Some Tree Time?

Throughout time, some of our greatest writers and philosophers have used trees as their inspiration. From Buddha sitting beneath the Bodi tree to the apple tree that triggered Sir Isaac Newton's curiosity to John Muir's observation that "The clearest way into the Universe is through a forest wilderness," trees and forests have the power to captivate and enlighten us.

Perhaps it is trees' abilities to make us feel small. There is no better way to appreciate the grandeur of nature than to stand beneath a towering oak. Or maybe it is the sounds-or silence-trees engender: from the eerie whistle of the wind through pine needles to the rustling of dry leaves as fall arrives, or the pure and simple stillness of the forest at dawn.

If you truly want to experience the pureness of nature, you could do no better than simply spending some time among the trees. Wood is one of the Five Elements of Feng Shui. During our September retreat, Feng Shui for Abundance: Exploring Nature, the Elements and Crystals we will take a hike amid the pines of Maine's forests to better understand trees' energy and potential to help us uncover our own "Aha!" moments.

We will explore the other elements as well, such as the crystal blue waters of Rangeley Lake and warm fires on cool nights. Discover your dominant element and how to balance it with those around you. As a bonus, Nicole Kay, founder of Atlas Trove, will show us how to use healing crystals to balance our elements for improved compassion and vitality.

Don't miss this chance to discover how you can tune into nature's abundance to increase your productivity and creativity. Check out the entire itinerary and photos of our beautiful private retreat on Indian Point on Maine's Rangeley Lake. Then contact me to reserve your space right away! P.S. If you need further inspiration, check out these photos of magnificent trees!
